Description	The principal extended a warm welcome at the gathering, where the Head of the Department introduced the guest speaker. The speaker addressed the audience, emphasizing the common misconception of treating regulatory affairs and quality assurance as synonymous. Despite occasional overlap, the speaker clarified the distinct nature of these fields, highlighting their fundamental differences. Regulatory affairs, the speaker explained, involves overseeing the entire process of product development, testing, manufacturing, marketing, and distribution to ensure compliance with relevant regulatory requirements from various bodies. The HOD concluded the event with a vote of thanks, expressing gratitude, and the guest received a token of appreciation as an honor.

Description	The principal welcomed the gathered audience warmly and greeted the guest, with the Head of the Department (HOD) delivering an introduction before handing over to the speaker. The speaker highlighted the FDA's pivotal role in upholding the quality of drug products by closely monitoring manufacturers' adherence to Current Good Manufacturing Practice (CGMP) regulations. These regulations establish essential criteria for methods, facilities, and controls in the manufacturing, processing, and packaging of drug products, ensuring their safety, claimed ingredients, and potency. In the evaluation of new and generic drug marketing applications, a crucial aspect involves assessing the manufacturer's compliance with CGMP standards. FDA assessors and investigators scrutinize whether the company possesses the necessary facilities, equipment, and capabilities to produce the intended drug. The HOD expressed gratitude in a vote of thanks, and the event concluded with the guest receiving an honorary memento.

Description	The principal delivered a welcoming address to the assembled audience, extending warm greetings to the guest. Following this, the Head of the Department (HOD) introduced the guest and smoothly transitioned the proceedings to the speaker. The speaker proceeded to elucidate that Japanese cosmetics fall under the oversight of the Pharmaceuticals and Medical Devices Act, commonly known as "the Act," issued by the Ministry of Health, Labour and Welfare (MHLW), serving as the competent authority. This regulation is complemented by various subsidiary regulations, standards, and guidance documents. Within the framework of the Act, Japan legally classifies beauty products into two primary groups: cosmetics and quasi drugs, with significantly differing regulations for each category. To bring the event to a close, the HOD conveyed gratitude through a vote of thanks, and the guest received a token of recognition.
